What Is A Paralegal?

A paralegal is "a person trained in subsidiary legal matters but not fully qualified as a lawyer." In other words, paralegals are trained in legal matters and perform a wide array of tasks that require proper educational training on both the law and legal procedures. Just because they are not fully qualified as a lawyer does not mean their services are any less worthwhile. The majority of the time, they have taken and completed a specific series of courses with regards to the legal system and its processes. In fact, it is not uncommon for professional attorneys to actually rely on the expertise of paralegals with regards to completing a number of tasks.

As for the precise work of practicing paralegals, they are known for their competency and efficiency in performing a wealth of complicated legal tasks. Some of their work includes the following:

- analyze and summarize depositions
- prepare and answer interrogatories
- draft procedural motions and other routine briefs
- perform legal research and analysis
- draft research memos
- perform case and project management

When working with us, you can meet with an attorney for approximately 15-20 minutes before meeting with your appointed paralegal. In this meeting, you are able to prepare for meeting with your paralegal by asking questions and receiving some preliminary legal advice.

Paralegals do have a limit, however, which is paralegals are not allowed to represent someone in the courtroom itself – to have an attorney accompany you at court would be an extra cost.
